

Exports of food and drink

Information for businesses on how to export food and drink products.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) is the UK Central Competent Authority (CCA) for International Trade. It is responsible for negotiating new export markets and for ensuring continued access to those export markets.

Our role is to provide assurance to Defra that food and drink exported from the UK has been produced in accordance with UK legislative requirements. We also make sure that it meets any additional import requirements that have been set by the destination country.

Export certification

Certain countries, including the EU require that some UK food and drink exports are certified by a UK certifying authority before being exported.

Information on export certification for exporters from England and Wales is available from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs \(Defra\) and for exports from Northern Ireland at Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs \(DAERA\).

Before you export food and drink products from the UK, you must check if there are any specific restrictions with:

- your customer
- the authorities in the destination country
- the relevant country's foreign embassy in the UK

The FSA is not responsible for issuing any type of export certification.

Individual countries will have specific requirements in terms of the types of documentation needed for products being exported. The requirements will differ depending on the country and the specific type of product.

There is no single source of information of those individual products to country export requirements. When commercially exporting food or drink from the UK, it is your responsibility to check the restrictions and export conditions that apply before you export.

In Great Britain, the Animal and Plant Health Agency \(APHA\) is responsible for issuing export health certificates (EHC) for certain products of animal origin (POAO) to specific countries. Find out how to Get an export health certificate.

In Northern Ireland, DAERA is responsible for issuing these EHCs for POAO.

Local authorities or district councils can provide export certification for certain products not covered by official EHCs issued by APHA and DAERA. This can relate to products that are:

- not of animal origin
- processed meat products
- manufactured food and drinks

The type of certification that needs to be provided is specific to the product being exported and the requirements of the destination country.

You should provide the information you have gathered on the import requirements of the destination country to your local authority or district council. This will inform what the export certification needs to say.

The minimum required by non-EU countries in such certification is usually confirmation that the product is:

- produced in accordance with domestic hygiene rules
- fit for human consumption
- freely available for sale within the UK

The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) can also provide Certificates of Free Sale for the export of certain processed food and drink products.

Guidance on exporting food and drink

Defra has published the following guidance for businesses on the rules for exporting products of animal origin, including to EU countries.

Additional sources of information on exporting

The Department for International Trade \(DIT\) has a specific remit to help businesses export and grow into global markets. It has developed the Exporting is Great website which has tailored support and advice for businesses. This advice can help businesses start exporting or increase the amount of goods and services they sell overseas.

The Open to Export website is a free online information service from The Institute of Export & International Trade. It is dedicated to helping small UK businesses get ready to export and expand internationally.

Trade bodies that can also help with advice on exporting your products include:

- Food and Drink Federation
- Food and Drink Exporters Association
- Provision Trade Federation
- Agriculture and Horticulture Development Board

Northern Ireland

The Northern Ireland Food and Drink Association can offer advice on exporting products.
