

Regulated products market authorisation process

This diagram outlines the FSA's process for the market authorisation of regulated products.

These products can include, for example, food additives, animal feed additives, novel foods and food or feed containing, consisting of or produced from genetically modified organisms (GMOs)

During the process the FSA will work with Food Standards Scotland, devolved governments, other government departments and other interested parties to consider the interests of those with responsibilities for food and agriculture, health and trade.
